The family of Frere traces its origin to the latter end of the thirteenth century. The name of Le Frere, as it was generally written, appears in documents and deeds of much earlier date in the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk. Richard Le Frere is reported to have fought under the banner of Robert Malet 1066, who received grants of land near Eye and Fressingham, Suffolk, at which place Richard Le Frere subsequently appears to have settled. The family of Frere have, from early times, held land in Norfolk, Suffolk, and Essex. The 1st baronet was Chief Commissioner of Scinde 1850-59, Gov of Bombay 1862-7, and Gov of the Cape of Good Hope, and High Commr for British S. Africa 1877-83.

The Marquess of Inlithgow is descended from Sir James Hope, K.B., 6th son of 1st baronet

The 1st baronet, Sir Thomas, Lord Advocate of Scotland, had fourteen children, two of whom were upon the Bench when he pleaded as Lord Advocate, from this circumstance, it is imagined, arises the privilege which that officer of the Crown enjoys of pleading with his head covered, it having been considered derogatory for a father to uncover before his sons In 1643 he was appointed Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, a dignity which has not since been enjoyed by any commoner The 11th baronet was M.P. for Midlothian (C) 1845-53

The Isham family probably of Saxon origin took their name from the village of Isham in Northamptonshire where land was given them by William I. Gyles Isham sat for Peterborough in Queen Mary's first Parliament. Sir John the 1st baronet who had been previously knighted was High Sheriff of Northamptonshire. The 2nd baronet Sir Justinian M P for Northamptonshire a staunch Royalist, suffered severely for his loyalty, both in person and estate. Sir Justinian the 4th baronet, M P for Northamptonshire upon the landing of the Prince of Orange, appeared in arms near Nottingham, with several lords and gentlemen who had formed themselves into a troop as a guard to the Princess Anne under the command of Dr Compton, Bishop of London. Sir Edmund the 6th baronet was also M P for Northamptonshire.

The legend respecting the origin of the crest borne by this family is that the chief Johnston, while at the Scotch Court hearing of the English king a meditated treachery, in endeavouring to get rid of Bruce in favour of Baliol, who was at that time at the English Court, sent him a spur with a feather tied to it, to indicate "flight with speed." Bruce acted on the hint, and, when king of Scotland, conferred upon him this crest. The 1st baronet represented himself in the Scotch Parliament, and voted for the Union. The 4th baronet was a member of the Imperial Parliament and Sir William, the 5th baronet, a member of seven successive Parliaments, assumed the surname of Julteney, and died without male issue, one of the richest subjects in the British Empire, his only child, Henrietta Laura, was created Countess of Bath, and died without issue. The 6th baronet, Sir John Lowther, M.P. for Weymouth 1810-11, twice declined a peerage that was offered to him by Spencer Perceval. The 7th baronet was M.P. for Weymouth (C) 1832-5, and the 8th baronet represented that Constituency in the same interest 1874-85.

The baronetcy was created with special remainder to the heirs male of the father of the 1st baronet. No reliable information regarding this family was obtained for many years, but it is believed that on the death of the 1st baronet, Sir William, in 1851 the title passed (in accordance with the special remainder) to the descendants of the younger brother (Henry de Castres Kellett, 6 1807) of the 1st baronet, whose third son was the Henry de Castres Kellett (ante), father of Sir Henry de Castres Kellett, 3rd Bt. (ante), who, however, did not assume the title until Feb. 1856. (His Dec.
1855 a William Kellett God. A. Plymouth, described in his death certificate as William Kellett, Esq., aged 57, and it is understood that he claimed to be a "son of Henry Kellett, 1st baronet of 1801.")

On the death of the 2nd baronet the baronetcy reverted to his uncle, William and son of John Leslie of Wardis father of the 1st baronet but he declined to assume the title as the Wardis estates did not accompany it. He is said to have had four sons each of whom died without issue. The baronetcy remained dormant for many years until it was assumed (without service of heirship) by John Leslie, who was 4th in descent from Norman the 3rd son of John Leslie of Wardis (ante) the 1st baronet. The baronetcy is stated to have been conferred with remainder to heirs male whatsoever.

The popular origin of the Leslie motto, "Grip fast," is said to be owing to Leslie Earl of Rothes, having saved Queen Margaret of Scotland from drowning by seizing hold of her girdle when she was thrown from her horse while crossing a swollen river. She cried out "Grip fast," and afterwards desired these words to be retained as her preserver's motto. A somewhat different interpretation is however, preserved in the Leslie family. It is there stated that the founder of the family was Bartholomew, a noble Hungarian, who went to Scotland with Queen Margaret, a D 1067. He was much esteemed by King Malcolm Canmore, whose sister he married. In his capacity of Chamberlain to the Queen it was his duty to accompany Her Majesty in her journeys, and as there were no carriages in those days, she rode behind him upon a pillion. On one occasion while fording a stream, the Queen slipped and nearly fell off, whereon Bartholomew cried out "Grip fast," to which Her Majesty replied, "Gin the buckle bide," there being only one buckle to the belt by which she held on. After this his exclamation was given as the family motto, and two more buckles were added to the colt on the pillion, and also the charge upon Bartholomew's arms which had heretofore consisted of only one buckle on a bend. The 1st baronet, Sir John, sat as M P for co. Monaghan (C) 1871-89.

The founders of the English branch of this ancient family came from the Duchy of Lorraine, and were given lands in Northumberland and Durham by William I. In the reign of Henry V., Edward Lorraine married (about 1416) Johanna, co-heiress of William del Strother, Lord of Lyham and, obtaining with her the estates of Kirk Harle, in Northumberland, removed thither. Here his descendants lived for near 420 years. Edward's successor, Robert Lorraine, was barbarously murdered at Kirk Harle by border robbers, in the reign of Edward IV., as is recorded on a monument raised on the spot to his memory. New arms were granted in 1539 to either Thomas Lorraine, a direct descendant of Edward (temp Henry V.), or to his younger brother William (who d unmarried), Thomas was a learned and a pious man, and zealous friend of Charles I., a circumstance that caused the soldiers of Cromwell to burn down his seat at Offerton. His eldest son Thomas was the 1st baronet. The 11th baronet, Rear Adm Sir Lambton Lorraine, was promoted Capt while in command of H.M.S. "Niobe," for special services in Central America in 1873, including bombardment of Omoa Castle during Civil War in Honduras, and received in 1874 the freedom of City of New York for staying the "Virginian" executions at Santiago de Cuba in Nov 1873.

The royal descent of this ancient clan can be traced to remote antiquity, Gregor Garubh or 'The Stout,' having fought under King Duncan I. In the early part of the 17th century there were feuds between numerous clans, the Mac Gregors being persecuted with such fury that any person might not late or slay them with impunity. In this situation they continued till they were courted to join the Solemn League and Covenant, upon promises of future friendship but they declared, "That as they bore the crown on the point of their swords they would not fail to use the latter in support of the former." They are the only instance of a race being forbidden to bear their family name, which was first proscribed by James VI., owing to treachery and misrepresentation. They were restored by Charles II. 1661 to their estates, and permitted to bear their own name. In the reign of William and Mary the law of proscription was again revived and continued in force until its repeal in 1774. The name was not, however, restored till a royal license to resume it was obtained by Sir John Murray (properly Mac Gregor) 1822.

The family of Macnaghten is of great antiquity in the Western Highlands. In 1267, Alexander III granted to Gilchrist Macnaghten and his heirs the custody of the castle and island of Fraochielean, on condition that he should rebuild it and keep it fit for the reception of the king whenever he should visit it. His great grandson Duncan a faithful partisan of the cause of King Duncan was one of the band that accompanied James Douglas in his attempt to deposit the heart of Robert Bruce at Jerusalem. The 1st baronet Sir Francis a Judge of the Supreme Court of Madras 1809-15 and of Calcutta 1815-25 assumed the additional surname and arms of Workman by royal license 1809. The 4th baronet Sir Edward P.C., G.C.B., G.C.M.G. was M.P. for Antrim (C) 1880-85 and for Antrim co., N. Ulster 1885-7 when he became a Lord of Appeal in Ordinary, with title of Baron Macnaghten. This family is of the oldest branch of the Maxwells Earls of Nthsdale. A Sir John Maxwell of Pollok distinguished himself at an early age in chivalry especially at the celebrated battle of Otterburn or Chevy Chase (1333) where he captured Sir Ralph Percy son of the Earl of Northumberland and brother of the renowned Hotspur. The 9th baronet who was hereditary succeeded by special limitation was M.P. for Perthshire (C) 1852-63 and 1874-8 and received as a commoner the exceptional honour of being created a K.T.

This family is lineally descended in the male line from Walter (third son of Walter, Lord High Steward of Scotland) who married 1258 the Countess of Menteath and thus acquired that earldom. He left two sons who both assumed the surname of Menteath viz., Alexander, 6th Earl of Menteath, and Sir John Menteath, Lord of Arran &c, who married Elyne, daughter of Grately, Earl of Mar, and whose granddaughter, Janet Keith, married Robert, 1st Lord Erskine and thus the Erskines acquired the ancient earldom of Mar. Alexander, 6th Earl of Menteath, had two sons—Allan, 7th Earl of Menteath, and Sir John Menteath of Ruskie (who died before 1333), from whom the Stuart Menteaths trace their descent. The Stuarts Earls of Menteath ended in Murdoch, Duke of Albany, forfeited by James I of Scotland. The father of the 1st baronet the Rev James Stuart Menteath assumed by sign manual in 1770, the additional surname of Stuart "for himself and his posterity." The 2nd baronet resumed the ancient name of Menteath, but his two youngest brothers retained the name of Menteath. Sir James, 3rd baronet became a naturalised American.

The family of Naesmyth is of remote antiquity in Tweeddale. The family legend is that "in the reign of James III of Scotland, the royal and baronial powers being nearly equal, repeated struggles took place between the nobles and the king. In one of these conflicts the Douglas partisans having been victorious, an ancestor of the Naesmyths who fought under the royal standard sought refuge in a neighbouring smithy, and the smith disguised him as his hammersman. The Douglas pursuers, entering the smithy, observed with suspicion the disguised hammersman, who in his agitation struck a false blow with the sledge hammer, whereupon one of the pursuers rushed at him calling out, 'Ye're nae smith', the disguised hammersman however overpowered his assailant, whilst the smith, armed with a red hot iron bar, rallied the king's followers, headed by Naesmyth, and regained the day. The king thereupon knighted the Naesmyth, and bestowed upon him a grant of lands with armorial bearings and motto 'Not by knavery, but by bravery.' James Naesmyth inventor of the steam hammer, is lineally descended from James Naesmyth of Posso, who was M P for Perthshire 1630-39. The 1st baronet, an eminent lawyer, was known as 'The Deil of Dawick', and the 2nd baronet sat as M P for Peeblesshire 1730-41. Sir James, 5th baronet, was a Member of the Roy Scottish Archers. The ancestors of this family were established for many generations at Montauban in Languedoc, being ennobled by patent 1547. On the revocation of the 'Edict of Nantes' Samuel de Péchels and his family were the objects of persecution and after suffering extreme cruelties M. Péchels was shipped with felons for the West Indies, whence he escaped to Ireland. His two daughters who had been taken from him, were placed in a convent and brought up as Catholics; they afterwards obtained a grant of all their father's lands by virtue of a letter from Louis XIV. His son Jacob afterwards spelt the name Pechell, and the patent of baronetcy was so made out. Sir Thomas 2nd baronet, assumed in 1801 the additional surname of Brooke by royal sign manual for himself and his issue. The 4th baronet was a Vice Adm., and sometime M.P. for Brighton (L).

This is a branch of the ancient Derbyshire family of Pole, many members of which have distinguished themselves in the field, notably Sir John Chandos, K.G., chief commander at Cressy and at Poitiers, and German Pole, who commanded in Ireland, and served against the Armada. Millicent, daughter of Charles Pole, Esq., of Holtcroft, married Charles Van Notten, Esq., who assumed the name of Pole, and was created a baronet. This gentleman was a descendant of Henry Van Notten, ennobled 1499 by the Emperor Maximilian, and whose only son Charles received from Charles V. the titles of Lord of Ath and Van der Notten, and Chatellaine of Alost. The 3rd baronet assumed in 1853, by Royal license, the additional and original paternal name of Van Notten.

The 1st baronet Sir Thomas was a son of Henry Hulton, of Andover, by Elizabeth eldest daughter of Isaac Preston, of Beeston St. Lawrence, whose estates he inherited, and in 1804 assumed the name and arms of Preston. The Prestons have held Beeston since 1640, and a Jacob Preston was one of four confidants who attended Charles I. during his imprisonment, and who was presented by that monarch, as a last mark of attachment, with an emerald ring, still preserved in the family

The former baronetcy of 1620 (claimed by the present holder of the 1809 creation as 13th Bt, which claim however, has not been officially established at the Heralds College) belonged to the old Kentish family, originally called Rookehurst and later Roobertes, and apparently became extinct on the demise in 1745 of Sir Walter, 6th baronet, who left an only daughter, Jane, who married the 3rd Duke of St. Albans. About 1775 the Duchess believed she had discovered the descendants of Thomas, second son of the 1st baronet, seated at Brightfieldstown, Roberts Cove, co. Cork and the title was assumed by the then head of that family, Randal, and subsequently by his eldest son Thomas, to whom however a new patent of Baronetcy was passed in 1809. The ancient property of Glassenbury, Cranbrook, Kent, which had then been in the direct line for nearly seven centuries, was left by the Duchess of St Albans to the second son of this Sir Thomas, viz, Col Thomas Walton Roberts, J P (High Sheriff of Kent 1879) who d 1882 and devised the said property by will to his nephew, the late Major John Roberts Atkin Roberts, J P, whose son is the present owner. This family takes its name from Shuckburgh in Warwickshire, where it has been seated since the 16th century. Richard Shuckburgh, Esq., M.P. for the county in 1641, and father of the 1st baronet, armed all his tenants and joined King Charles I. at Edgecote, where he was knighted. After the battle of Edge Hill, he retired and fortified himself on Shuckburgh Hill, where most of his tenants were slain, and he himself was taken prisoner. After being confined in Kenilworth Castle a considerable time, he purchased his liberty at a dear rate. His eldest son, John, was created a baronet by Charles II.

The original family name of the Stockenström family was Andersen. The founder of the family when Prime Minister to the King of Sweden, continued his fealty to the monarch during a troublous time when all other friends had forsaken him. In reference to this service the King remarked that his faithful servant was like the "stump of a tree in the midst of a torrent, with all branches but one torn off," and therefore granted him a name and armorial ensigns and motto in accordance therewith. The 1st baronet Sir Andries was Lieut. Governor at the Cape of Good Hope and Captain in the regiment of Corsican Rangers. The 2nd baronet was sometime an M.L.A. of Cape of Good Hope.

Sir George, the 3rd baronet was fined £1,460 for his loyalty to Charles I. In 1670 he obtained a new patent granted to himself, with the old precedency and with a special remainder to his second son, John, and his heirs male, intending thereby to exclude his first son. The elder son, however, on his father's decease, claimed and enjoyed the baronetcy created by the original patent, so that there were two baronetcies in the family till, on the death (without issue) of Sir John, 6th baronet under the old creation, they became united in Sir John, 3rd baronet of the new. The 11th baronet, having been for twenty years Physician to the Northampton Infirmary, took Holy Orders, and subsequently became an eminent preacher.
